

destroy the banks—derange the currency—depress all the great branches of industry which interfered with New England interests,—and cause the suspension of specie payments, in the hope that he might gain for Nicholas Biddle's Bank a recharter, under the pretence of restoring specie payments and regulating the currency. If we are correct, it confirms the truth quoted from the Advertiser, that "those who depend on party leaders for POWER, will sometimes stop short of nothing, however base and immoral, which may have a tendency to sustain their interests." The object of this writer seems to be to convince those in New England who depend on Biddle for EMOLUMENTS, that the late disasters really have a tendency to sustain their interests. The spirit of malignity and revenge with which he writes of the expected ruin of the property of the south, and the expected overthrow of those who are in the possession of it, will not be approved of in this community. The base and immoral means he and others have so frequently resorted to in their silly tirades, will only show the public how far men will go in "sustaining party views and party leaders," and may induce them to believe that he may not be one of those who "go wrong, not from want of principle, but from want of information and intelligence;" but one of those who, as he remarks, depending on party views and party leaders for power and emoluments, will sometimes stop short of nothing which may have a tendency to sustain their interests. His last communication seems to appeal to the passions of such persons.

Such appeals scarcely ever succeed. Hitherto the revolutionists, who depend on Whig doctrines and Biddle's aid for POWER, have been eminently unsuccessful.—Those who depend upon the same party views and party leaders for EMOLUMENTS, (even supposing that Biddle's, Calhoun's, and Webster's measures and experiments may have a tendency to sustain their interests,) will also, probably, be disappointed. While he is indulging in malignant and revengeful expectations, the writer in the Advertiser should remember that the Northern and Southern States "have no interests depending, save what are held in common"—that these EXPECTATIONS may be owing to "want of information and intelligence," and may prove as delusive as his ASSERTIONS have been untrue.

To conclude—we think that Webster's "experiment" for lightening the Treasury will not proceed. Congress will probably "pause and contemplate our condition," as Webster proposed that they should do, in order to "judge more wisely by the results of our EXPERIMENT."—But we subscribe to all the other remarks at the close of S.'s communication in the Advertiser, which we quote, severely prefixing the remarks, that the travels of the god-like "experimenter" are understood to serve himself, although he takes so much pains to avow as his motive, a desire to see the country!

"In the meantime the 'experiment' proceeds, and the people who place the 'experimenters' in power, will, it is to be hoped, gain wisdom by its results, and learn in their future selections of rulers, to distinguish the real patriot, who takes office that he may serve his country, from the ignorant, selfish and unprincipled demagogue, whose sole object is TO SERVE HIMSELF."

Pedagogy.—The June Knickerbocker contains an interesting article on Pedagogy, in which the writer very laudably endeavors to raise the profession of a schoolmaster to the dignity which it deserves. He says that writers in general have made both the schoolmaster and his occupation a subject of ridicule. A portion of such injustice they have received both from Scott and Irving. "By second rate lawyers, or as they would be called in England, scrivener; by merchants, whose weekly literature is contained in their blotter and day-book, and who form their moral codes, on Sunday, over their ledgers; by all quacks and pill-mongers, who get their living so easily by imposition that they look with pity and contempt upon all labor of any kind; by all money-lenders, at exorbitant interest, and speculators in wild lands, who look for sudden fortunes; by all politicians for a living, and not for patriotism; by dandies, idlers—all foolish people, in short, be they more or less." By all these is the business of the schoolmaster underrated and despised. "Why," asks the writer, "if you are a young man, and love literature, do you not become a pedagogue? The employment rightly pursued, may be made delightful. If you get the mastership of a city school, you will have from $1500 to $2500 per annum. If you live in the country and take one of the famous New York Academies, you will have from $600 to $1000 per annum. If a man has his library beforehand, he may live happily, rationally, and refinely, upon either of these salaries." How much better is this, we would add, than this living upon tick for the first ten years of their practice, as is the inevitable fate of the majority of young lawyers and physicians.

English Orthography.—Nothing can be imagined more wretchedly irregular than English Orthography.—The grammarians pretend to establish certain rules for the pronunciation of words, but these are only of a very general nature, so general as to be almost useless in practice. It is a pity that some Royal Academy was never established for the purpose of adopting and inventing improvements in Orthography and Etymology, according as they were practicable. There is no syllable in the English language but that has more than one way of being pronounced, without any alteration in the mode of spelling.—It would require no great share of ingenuity to make these necessary improvements—but it would require more influence than the greatest man in the world could exercise, to persuade men to adopt them. They will never be adopted, until either England or America has established an Academy, consisting of the greatest scholars living, whose object, like a similar institution in Spain, should be to sanction and establish all necessary improvements in the language.

Mr Charles Donnell, who comes here very highly recommended by gentlemen of the first respectability in various parts of the United States, is about to open a school in Boston for the purpose of teaching the art of playing on the German Flute. His rooms are at No 202, Tremont street. He has with him evidence of having given perfect satisfaction wherever he has taught, and in many instances his pupils and scientific musicians have been in complimenting him in various forms, as manifestations of their sense of his rare qualifications for his profession.

"Live and let live" is the title of an excellent and timely little volume by Miss Sedgwick, just received by Weeks, Jordan & Co. It contains a very interesting story of domestic life, in which are inculcated those duties servants and employers owe to each other, and of which both parties are too often ignorant and regardless.

A. & G. Ralston & Co. of Philadelphia have given notice that the suspension of their London branch, which they think will be but for a short duration, will in nowise jeopardise the property in their hands in this country, as the returned Bills on their London branch are paid off, principal, interest, and re-exchange on presentation.

Bristol, Rhode Island, July 29, 1837.
The "force of steam, and the genius of Fulton,"—is not that a poetical sentiment?—to-day, landed me in the beautiful town of Bristol, Rhode Island; and here I shall remain, till Henry A. Wise shall have arrived, on his way to "drink gin and smoke it," with "Levi Lincoln, and Pliny Merrick, and forty others," at Worcester. When that happens, I shall ascend the Blackstone Canal and join that cold water party, which dashes the goblet with a little brandy, just to kill the insects.

The imperial kingdom of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, is just about, at this time, as Tom Piper bath it, "in a hug-a-mug, like old Coal's wig." The plain English of all of which is, Rhode Island is in a state of excitement in relation to the Congressional election.

The Hon. Dutee J. Pearce, of Newport, and the Hon. Jesse Howard, of Cranston, are the candidates of the administration party, and I suppose will receive, generally its support, notwithstanding a slight schism exists among its partisans. Mr Pearce should be elected if the good people of Rhode Island are disposed to send a man to Congress who will faithfully attend to, and ably discharge the duty that may be assigned him.

I have known Mr Pearce many years, and although I never did anything to promote his election, I must do him the justice to say, that he has at all times acquitted himself at Washington, in the most able manner. He is a man of great industry, and at all times devoted to the best interests of the state, and I will add, Rhode Island never can be more honorably represented than she has been by Mr Pearce.

A variety of factions have been arrayed against Mr Pearce, and for the sake of defeating him, some half dozen tickets will be offered. Old Mr Tristram Burgess, who has been laid on the shelf by circumstances and his own party, is actively engaged in opposing Mr Pearce, and will do all he can to defeat him.

Yours, &c.
P. P. PUCKLER.

MISS MARTINEAU.
Mr Greene.—I am quite at a loss to account for the very general ridicule which has fallen, from all quarters, upon Miss Martineau's "Society in America," which is so greatly superior to any thing I ever believed the author was capable of performing, and so different from what it has been represented to be in the public papers, that I have finished it with surprise and admiration. There is a greater depth of philosophy in the work than I had supposed her mind was capable of fathoming; and the writer seems to be a worthier and more sincere admirer of our institutions than any citizen of Great Britain who has travelled on our coast. Her work, so far from derogating from the character of our people and our Government, is, on the whole, highly commendatory of both. She is a real democrat—without any sympathy for a monarchical or aristocratical form of government, and almost all the ridicule which she bestows upon the manners of the Americans, falls upon that upstart class of people in our cities who ape the customs of the English aristocracy. For the middle classes of our society, she entertains the highest respect—and says that the only vulgarity which she observed in America was among the apish customs of that class who style themselves the "first people." I have talked with a large number of intelligent individuals, who confess that they were very agreeably surprised, after what had been said in the newspapers about Miss Martineau's work, to find it so full of good sense, of candor and of sincere commendation of all that seemed to her really commendable in the United States. In regard to her opinions on the Slave question, I think we ought not to condemn the whole volume, on account of her want of prudence in writing upon this topic. There are some things in her work which savor of scandal, because they are not true; but she must have been misinformed by some scandal-monger.—Considering Miss Martineau's work as a whole—it is certainly one of the most delightful and most useful works that has been written on America, and the writer deserves our gratitude as a benefactor to the community.

FLACCUS
The following curious article is from Maurice's History of Hindostan—quoted from the SEVA:
Penances.—In the wood Midhoo, which is on the confines of the Kingdoms of Brige, Tarakee selected a pleasant and beautiful spot, adorned with verdure and blossoms, and there exerted himself in penance and mortification, externally, with the sincerest piety, but in reality with the most malignant intention, and with the determined purpose of oppressing the devotees; penance such as credulity itself was astonished to hear; and they are here recorded—

1. For a hundred years, he held up his arms and one foot towards Heaven, and fixed his eyes on the Sun for the whole time.
2. For a hundred years he remained standing on tip-toe.
3. For a hundred years more, he nourished himself with nothing but water.
4. For a hundred years more, he lived upon nothing but air.
5. For a hundred years more, he stood and made his adorations in the river.
6. For a hundred years more, he made those adorations buried up to his neck in the earth.
7. For a hundred years more, he was enveloped in fire.
8. For a hundred years more, he stood upon his head with his feet towards heaven.
9. For a hundred years more, he stood upon the palm of one hand resting upon the ground.
10. For a hundred years more, he hung by his hand from the branch of a tree.
11. For a hundred years more, he hung from a tree with his head downwards.

When he at length came to a respite from these severe mortifications, a radiant glory encircled the devotee, and a flame of fire, arising from his head, began to consume the whole world."

POLICE COURT.

A Co-partnership Row.—Disputes arising out of business connections ought never to be brought into the Police Court for adjustment, for in the course of such an investigation, queer little affairs of a private and delicate nature frequently leak out. A very complicated case of this sort came off yesterday, between a couple of el-dévant partners, who obtained cross warrants against each other. The first case inquired into was William M. Hatstatt against William Woodruff. Mr Hatstatt—a white man—was formerly well known as an active sailor boarding-house-keeper, but having enjoyed recently the blessing of listening to the Rev Mr Taylor's marine preaching, he has seen the evil of his ways, and abandoned the traffic, and is now engaged in endeavoring to Meliorate the Condition of the Sailors, and, as his friend, has acquired the flattering title of the Sailor's Lawyer. Woodruff—a black man—has for years been known as a dealer in sloop clothing, and proved a good character for honesty and correct behavior. By the admissions of both, it appeared that Woodruff's shop was a partnership concern, in which Hatstatt was interested. In June Hatstatt attached all Woodruff's property, and put a keeper in the shop, and then the bad blood of both began to boil, by the fire of mutual crimination and re-crimination. The countenances of both, as they respectively took their opposite stands, bore the impress of mortal wrath; and as they glanced indignantly at each other, they personified one of Milton's boldest passages—

"So frowned the mighty combatants, that Hell Grew darker at their frown—so matched they stood; For never but once more was either like To meet so great a foe."

It fell to Hatstatt's lot to tell his story first, and he did not permit it to pass away unimproved. Said he:—"From the 20th to the 24th of June, I attached Mr Woodruff's stock, and put a keeper in his store. For doing this, he had a spite against me, and pushed me out of his store, after filling my pockets with bits of old cloth and old iron. Day after day he would lay in wait to assault me, and jostle me from the sidewalk, as I would be passing by his shop. He would call out after me, saying that I was a thief and robber. I made no resistance to these assaults, because I thought I should put myself down below my dignity to notice him, or have a street row. A number of my neighbors, however, did not know better what belonged to their own respectability than to let themselves down so low, as to talk with Woodruff about his difficulty with me, and to encourage him to annoy me. On Saturday, he came running up after me, asking aloud, who paid for my dinner on the Fourth of July, last year. I only said to him—'Go away, Nigger.' But he still crowded on to me, and asked me if I had not a sword-cane in my hand. I must admit then, that I turned round quick, and struck him with a cane in the face, and broke off the ferrule in doing so. Woodruff then ran into the middle of the street, and commenced throwing bricks at me, even after I retreated into a store. One of the bricks hit me in the legs. The people finally stepped him."

It now became Woodruff's turn to blaze away, and he first proceeded to clear up the Fourth of July dinner business, which he did in a manner that provoked the Court into subdued mirth, and the less dignified officers and attendants into a downright horse-laugh. It showed a singular intimacy and exchange of delicate courtesies between the two families of the partners. He said as follows:—"Please your honor, I should like to tell you why I asked Hatstatt, who paid for my Fourth of July dinner. You see before he sued me, and cheated me in the price of a seal, he appeared to be a good friend of mine. Well a year ago, on the Fourth of July, I bought a fine roasting pig, and paid two dollars and three quarters for it. In carrying it home, I called into Mrs Hatstatt's and she looked at it several times, said it was a very fine pig, and that she should like very much to have a piece of it. She certainly said this over as much as six times, and as I was going home I thought about it, and began to mistrust something was the matter; and when I got home I told my wife what Mrs Hatstatt had said about the pig, and that I thought we would send her over a piece. When I thus told my wife how very anxious Mrs Hatstatt was, she expressed her opinion that she was in the ———. Well when the pig was roasted, my wife cut it right in two, and put one half in a nice dish, and laid a clean white cloth over it, and I carried it over to Mrs Hatstatt, who was very glad that I had brought it, and thanked me so much and so very handsomely, that I thought my wife was entirely correct in her opinion. But that was not the end of the pig, for some of Hatstatt's people mentioned the fact, that they had a pig roasted in my house for dinner, and Hatstatt, who began to be ashamed to have such a report going round, began to give out, that it was n't so. Well after he sued me, and had done one thing and another to me, I thought I'd just put him in mind of his Fourth of July dinner, and he hit me the severe blow with the cane, that he has told you about."

Numerous other witnesses were examined, and from some cause or other seemed to manifest a sympathy for Woodruff. The Court suggested the convenience of inquiring into Woodruff's complaint against Hatstatt for the assault with the cane before passing sentence on Woodruff, and the counsel consenting, he plead guilty.

The Court then fined Hatstatt $5.00, and costs, and ordered him to give bonds to keep the peace for three months, in the sum of $100. With regard to Woodruff, His Honor observed, that he had evidently been smarting under a sense of pecuniary wrong; but still the acts done by him amounted to a technical assault, for which he should fine him $2.00, and costs; and it was also necessary, for the quiet of the neighborhood to put a stop to future collisions between the partners. He should require bonds in $50.00 from him, to keep the peace three months.

Attempted Suicide, and for Love.—Shakespeare's sweet Rosalind, in one of her satirical moods, said—"Men have died, and worms have eaten them, but not for love." The pert creature meant to insinuate, that men are incapable of attaining unto such a sublimated degree of love, as would burst the heart-strings, as a chain cable is snapped, or a steam boiler blown to atoms, but we have daily instances that her sarcasm was not justified by a true estimate of man's devotion to the fair, even unto death or madness. Such an instance occurred on May's wharf on Sunday night. As Mr Hosea Sargent was preparing for bed, he heard that there was a sailor on the wharf acting as if he intended to make way with himself, and he instantly proceeded thither, where, after some search, he found a young man, named George Newcomb, hanging down by the wharf, to a chain cable. He was insensible, and Mr Sargent had him conveyed to the North Watch-house, where, after some exertions, he was brought to; but he afterwards made several attempts to strangle himself. All the Watch could get out of him was—"I love her—I love her—I love her; and I'll die for her." There was a lock of his girl's hair in one corner of the handkerchief with which he had tied himself to the chain. One of the officers of the Watch went over to Charlestown to see Newcomb's mother, who expressed the most lively gratitude for the care which the Watch had taken of her son.

LOOK OUT FOR A PIRATE.

Particulars of the Piracy committed on the bark Tallant, Capt. Jenkins at this port from Messina.
"June 28th, 6 P. M., Peak of Pico N. E. by N. 65 miles distant, fell in with a hermaphrodite brig with Spanish colors—was hailed, ordered to heave to, lower a boat and go on board—while heaving to and clearing away the boat, two six-pounders loaded with grape and canister shot, were fired at us, the shots passing through the sails. At 6.30, Capt. Jenkins was on board the pirate vessel. As soon as he stepped on deck, he was seized by two of his crew, armed with cutlasses, which were brandished over his head—led forward and shoved down the fore-scuttle; immediately afterwards, his boat's crew were thrust down the same place, and a guard of three men armed with muskets, placed over them. At 8.20, P. M., Capt. J. and men were ordered on deck, thence into the boat and to the bark, receiving some kicks in their progress.

While Capt J. was confined on board the pirate vessel, an officer and seven men, armed with knives, pistols and cutlasses, went on board the bark, drove the mate and the remainder of the crew into the fore-castle, beating them as they went down the gangway, and placed a sentry over them. Shortly afterwards they ordered four men on deck—two of them were placed in the boat alongside, and the other two sent aloft to assist in unbending the sails. The pirates sent four boat loads of articles from the Tallant to their own vessel. Capt. J. trimmed his sails in the best possible manner during the night to clear the pirate, but in the morning she was within two miles of him—two full-rigged brigs appearing in sight to the N. E. steering E. the pirate gave chase to them, which enabled Capt J. to escape.

The piratical vessel was American built, New York model, about 200 tons burthen, best-lust, stern posts nearly upright, no boats, and apparently but a short time out of port. She was armed with one long 12 pounder on a pivot amidships, five 6 pound carronades, waste guns, muskets, cutlasses, and a crew of from 25 to 30 men.

All the Captain's clothing with the exception of what he had on, some fancy articles purchased for his family, worth about $500, were taken. His chronometer and the mate's watch, were the only articles that escaped their observation.

Capt Jenkins thinks that the pirate was from Gibraltar last.—City Hall Books.

The pirates sent four boat loads of articles from the Tallant to their own vessel. Capt. J. trimmed his sails in the best possible manner during the night to clear the pirate, but in the morning she was within two miles of him—two full-rigged brigs appearing in sight to the N. E. steering E. the pirate gave chase to them, which enabled Capt J. to escape.

The piratical vessel was American built, New York model, about 200 tons burthen, best-lust, stern posts nearly upright, no boats, and apparently but a short time out of port. She was armed with one long 12 pounder on a pivot amidships, five 6 pound carronades, waste guns, muskets, cutlasses, and a crew of from 25 to 30 men.

All the Captain's clothing with the exception of what he had on, some fancy articles purchased for his family, worth about $500, were taken. His chronometer and the mate's watch, were the only articles that escaped their observation.

Capt Jenkins thinks that the pirate was from Gibraltar last.—City Hall Books.

An Anti-Slavery meeting was again held at Brighton last evening, which was attended by many individuals, who caring little for the opinions of the Abolitionists, were nevertheless prepared to resist any infringement on the rights of American citizens. Some boys and young men, attempted to breed some disturbance, but did not succeed. They then adjourned to a pasture hard by, and undertook to fire a swivel, which burst on the second discharge. Nine of the Selectmen or Magistrates of Brighton were present.—Mercantile Journal.
